On 5th October 2023, the Lecture on the Art of Drafting in Civil and Criminal cases was conducted by the Moot Court Society, where the special lecture focused on various civil and criminal applications concerning the use of Artificial intelligence. There was an introduction to the relevant provisions of The Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 under which various applications are drafted in the criminal courts in India. The provisions are according to the framing of applications under the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 and the requisites to be taken care of in meeting clients, analyzing cases, and preparing preliminary drafts, and the drafts must be precise. Further, the limitations of using AI in the legal field were discussed.

Feedback factor:

Ritika M (IX sem BA.LL. B)- Two sessions on drafting in civil and criminal cases were held, and they were very beneficial in providing us with knowledge about the process, necessary conditions, comprehension and analysis of the relevant facts, dos and don'ts when drafting, and applications of artificial intelligence.

The faculty co-ordinator Prof. Asmathunnisa then welcomed the guests and audience and walked the attendees through the various achievements of the MCS during the academic year 2022-23. Ma'am then spoke about the career milestones of Justice Ashok G. Nijagannavar which greatly inspired the student audience. This was followed by an address by Justice Ashok. He told the audience about how he ventured into the legal realm by a mere coincidence in sharp contrast to how the legal profession today is a conscious choice of career that is highly sought after. He reminded the students that money was secondary to professional fulfillment and ethics in a profession like ours and that we as advocates have an onerous duty to serve our nation. Prof. Nataraju, our principal, gave the next address. He highlighted the importance of housing huge ambitions which serve to act as the driving force behind successful careers. He quoted Roscoe Pound to remind us that lawyers are ultimately social engineers who owe a huge duty to society.

After the speeches of the guests, the badging ceremony commenced. The Induction Ceremony finally concluded with the release of the inter-class moot proposition for the academic year.

- Parties in arbitration have the freedom to choose the law, the decision-maker, the location, the language, and the procedure. They are not required to subject themselves to an unfamiliar legal system and can select a neutral panel that reflects their interests.

MEDIATION

Mediation is a confidential and speedy dispute resolution process for two parties. A neutral third party conducts it, and unlike arbitration, it's non-binding. Parties can leave if they're not satisfied. Mediation saves time and offers a better outcome. It's an agreement beneficial to both parties, unlike in a court where issues are decided based on facts.
