

POLICY FOR SLOW LEARNERS

A slow learner is a student whose thinking and scholastic skills are slow compared to the pace of their peer group with regard to their academics. These students may be competent in other non academic activities. Being a slow learner simply means that you may require more time or different approaches to grasp and retain information. Everyone learns at their own pace and providing a supportive environment can make a significant in their academic journey.

The policy for supporting slow learners in college typically involves implementing various strategies to cater to their specific needs. Some of the norms are at place in the college to encourage those students to enable them to perform on par with that of their fellow mates.
